

FREE FIRST-WEEK KIT

Set up your Life Dashboard in 7 days — 3 minutes a day.

Most people abandon a planner in the first week, usually after a big, exhausting setup session. This kit does the opposite: one small step a day, so by Sunday your dashboard is set up, your priorities are clear and you've already started building streaks.

Inside: the 7-day plan · a 120-goal library (separate spreadsheet) · the Sunday 15 weekly reset.

Three rules for this week

1. Small beats complete. You don't need every tab filled in. You need a few goals you care about and one habit you'll actually do.

2. Never miss twice. Missing a day is normal. Missing two starts a new habit — of skipping.

3. Balance is the point. The dashboard shows every area of your life. When one ring stays empty, that's your cue — not a failure.

The Sunday 15 (your weekly reset)

1. 3 min — Look back. Open the Dashboard. What moved? Which ring didn't?
2. 3 min — Tidy up. Tick finished goals, update Progress %, clear last week's tasks.
3. 3 min — Choose. Pick 3 priorities for the week — at least one from your lowest area.
4. 4 min — Plan. Put them into the Weekly Planner on specific days.
5. 2 min — One kind thing. Add one thing just for you. It counts.

Name your life areas

1. Open the Settings tab. Set the Year and the day your week starts.
2. Rename the 8 life areas so they fit your life — e.g. Parent, Leader, Athlete, Faith.
3. Add your name. That's it for today.

Tip: areas are roles you play, not projects. If two feel similar, merge them.

SETTINGS — set these up once; everything else updates automatically

Blue text in white boxes = cells you can type in. Everything else is calculated.

Choose 1–2 goals per area

1. Open the Goal Library from this kit and pick 1–2 goals per area — or write your own.
2. Paste them into the Goals tab (instructions are inside the library) and give each a Due date.
3. Write how you'll measure it. If you can't measure it, make it smaller.

Tip: 8–16 goals is plenty for a year. You can always add more in Q2.

MY GOALS BY LIFE AREA

Pick a life area, write the goal, say how you'll measure it and whether it's urgent / important. Tick the box when it's done. Priority, status and quarter fill in by themselves.

[illegible]

Decide what matters most

1. For each goal, answer Urgent? and Important? on the Goals tab.
2. Open Priorities. Your matrix has filled itself in.
3. Circle your three Do First goals. They get your energy this month.

Tip: if everything is urgent, nothing is. Be honest — most goals belong in Schedule.

PRIORITIES — your open goals sorted into the Eisenhower Matrix

Filled in automatically from the Goals tab (Urgent? / Important?). Completed goals drop off.

Pick 3–5 habits (not 12)

1. In Settings, list 3–5 habits that move your Do First goals — and a target number of days per month.
2. Open this month's tab (e.g. Oct) and tick today's box for anything you've done.
3. Log today's mood in the Mood row.

Tip: missed a day? Never miss twice. Streaks carry over between months.

Plan your week in 15 minutes

1. Open the Weekly Planner and type any date in this week.
2. Add 3–6 tasks per day — at least one should move a goal forward.
3. Tick tasks as you go and watch the bars fill.

Tip: plan on Sunday, review on Friday. The 'Sunday 15' card in your inbox walks you through it.

Add the dates that matter

1. In Settings → Key dates, add birthdays, holidays and deadlines.
2. Open the Calendar: goal deadlines and key dates are highlighted for the whole year.
3. Spot a crunch month? Move a due date now, not later.

Tip: add recurring life admin too — car service, renewals, school terms.

Read your dashboard

- 1. Open the Dashboard. Which life area has the lowest ring?
- 2. Pick ONE small action for that area and add it to next week's planner.
- 3. In Quarterly Review, score each area 1–10 today. That's your baseline.

Tip: the point isn't perfect scores — it's noticing early when an area is slipping.

You did it.

Your dashboard is set up, your priorities are clear and you've started your first streaks. From here, it's just the Sunday 15 each week and a Quarterly Review every three months.
